

Cancer Screening Clinics for Indigenous Communities

This month, in collaboration with Aamjiwnaang First Nation, Walpole Island First Nation, Kettle and Stony Point First Nation, the Sarnia-Lambton Native Friendship Centre, Bluewater Health, North Lambton Community Health Centre and Lambton Elderly Outreach, we held several cancer screening clinics for Indigenous communities.

We know that Indigenous communities face barriers in accessing routine screening and testing. Regular screening for cancer prevention is a vital part of overall health maintenance, and early detection can save lives.

The fully booked clinics welcomed members from Aamjiwnaang, Kettle & Stony Point, Walpole Island and the Sarnia-Lambton Native Friendship Centre for breast and cervical cancer screenings. Thank you to the organizers for making it a successful event.
